

OBJECTIONS TO GRADE CROSSING ARE OVERRULED

STATE UTILITIES COMMISSION
HOLDS AGAINST I. C. ON COL-ONY ELECTRIC LINE.

VICTORY FOR MAYOR BRINTON

Appeared as Chief Contender Against Claims of the Railway Company.

(Special to Telegraph)
Chicago, Apr. 14.—The State Public Utilities Commission this afternoon, after hearing arguments in the objection of the Illinois Central Railway company to the establishment of a grade crossing by the S. D. & E. Electric Railway company over its tracks in North Crawford avenue at Dixon, ordered the dismissal of the objections and allowed the electric traction company to install the grade crossing as contemplated. There were several railroad officials present to press their objections, while Mayor W. B. Brinton of Dixon, appeared as chief sponsor for the crossing as contemplated. He argued that the construction of the electric railway was a necessity for proper transportation to the State Industrial Colony for the Improbable Epileptics, that he had promised, on behalf of the city of Dixon that the street car line would be extended to the colony, that the objections of the railway company were unreasonable and that the construction of an overhead crossing was an impossibility.

TO ASK FEDERAL JURY TO ACT IN EPIDEMIC MATTER

INDICTMENTS MAY BE RETURNED AGAINST FARMERS WHO BLOCKED OFFICIALS

(Special to Telegraph)
Chicago, Apr. 14.—Information will be filed with the federal grand jury in a few days against twenty farmers in northern Illinois who are alleged to have resisted government officials in their attempts to enforce the foot and mouth quarantine. It is said that in some instances the farmers blocked with guns the investigators who sought to examine their cattle.

While in Dixon during the recent epidemic of the disease here Dr. Otis of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry, reported that several Lee county farmers had attempted to block the efforts of the officials. Whether the information to be filed with the federal jury is against any of the Lee county men is not known here.

House Kills Last Chance To Change State Basic Code

Follows Action Of Senate And Defeats Resolution
For Amendment

(Associated Press.)
Springfield, Ill., Apr. 14.—All possibility of the submission by the present legislature of an amendment to the amending clause of the Constitution of the state of Illinois was killed today when the Rinehart resolution, providing for the submission of such an amendment, failed of passage in the house by three votes. A similar resolution was defeated in the senate yesterday.
Devine voted for the Rinehart resolution; Leach voted against it and Brewer did not vote.
Springfield, Ill., April 14.—The senate, in retaliation for the house's defeat of the constitutional convention, killed Governor Dunne's proposition for an amendment to the amending clause of the constitution of the state. The resolution secured only twenty-four votes. The two-thirds majority required is thirty-four votes. Before the roll call was announced Senator John T. Denver changed his vote from yes to no, in order to call up the resolution for reconsideration today. The vote indicated, however, that the proposition cannot be passed in the senate.
The resolution was killed after an amendment limiting to three the number of amendments which might be submitted at one election, offered by Senator W. A. Compton of Macomb, had been adopted by a vote of 27 to 11.
Previous amendments by Denver proposing to limit to two, and by Canady, placing the limitation at five, were tabled.
Senator E. S. Smith's resolution for an amendment of the constitution to abolish the minority representation system was defeated by a vote of 25 to 11.

IOWA MAN MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH IN NELSON YARDS

FELL BETWEEN THE CARS ON FREIGHT TRAIN AND HEAD WAS CUT OFF.

WAS "BOMMING" TO CHICAGO

Companion Says Olson Was Climbing
From Top of One Car to Another—Fell Between.

Arthur Olson, a young man from Sioux City, Ia., met an untimely death shortly before midnight last night in the Northwestern railroad yards at Nelson, being decapitated. The right arm was severed near the shoulder, both feet were mangled and the body was covered with bruises. The remains were brought to this city at an early hour this morning, and taken to the undertaking rooms of Joseph Staples where the inquest was held this afternoon.
The young man had been working in a packing house in Sioux City up to about six weeks ago when he was laid off and having some friends employed in packing houses in Chicago he decided to strike out for that city and try and get a job. On Monday night, he, in company with a companion by the name of John Kelly, who likewise was without work, having lost his job in a railroad roundhouse, caught a train out of Sioux City for Chicago. They rode on a passenger train as far as Missouri Valley and there caught a through freight made up mostly of refrigerator cars for Chicago. A short stop was made at junction points through Iowa, where crews changed, and they reached Nelson about 11:30 o'clock last night. A stop was made for coal.
Both of the young men were riding on top of the train at this time. Kelly being some two cars ahead of Olson. As the train started to move, according to the story told by Kelly, he called back to Olson to come on forward to the car on which he was riding. Olson started and as he was stepping from one car to another, there was a sudden jerk of the train, and he saw his companion suddenly disappear from view. He claims that he immediately ran ahead and notified a brakeman and he signaled the engineer to stop. On going back the body of the young man was found laying between the rails with the head on the outside of the north rail. It was taken from under the train and was carried to the station and coroner George Stephan of Ashton, was notified. The coroner in company with Undertaker Joseph Staples of this city went to Nelson on the 1:57 a. m. train.
According to Kelly the unfortunate young man was aged about 23 years and leaves his parents and one brother and a sister residing at Sioux City. His parents are poor in only ordinary circumstances and his father is a shoe maker. He is a clean looking young man and had a little over four dollars in his pockets.

County Athletic Meet Postponed Until Next Year

Lack Of Time To Prepare Teams
Causes Abandonment
Of Scheme

The county athletic school meet, which it had been hoped to hold in this city the latter part of the present month, has been abandoned due to the continued cold weather as well as the shortness in time for preparation. Several of the schools felt that such a meet would be a good thing but the time was too short to get teams in condition to represent the schools. At the annual teachers' institute to be held the middle of August the idea will again be taken up and plans formulated for holding such a meet next spring. As to what the events will be, will be discussed at the fall meeting and the Teachers can be given an idea so that they can have plenty of practice to get in condition to compete.

NORTON CHARGE INTENT TO KILL

Young Fellow Who Assaulted Joe Arigo Faces Serious Charge From Grand Jury.

The grand jury completed their labors this morning about 10 o'clock, returning eight indictments and making a favorable report on the condition in which they found the county jail, as well as commending the way in which Janitor George Eichenberg has kept the court house and grounds around the building.
Of the eight indictments, five of the alleged offenders are in custody, while the other three have not yet been served. Those given out are as follows:
Harvey Norton, indicted for attempt to murder and attempt to rob.
John Dryson, indicted for forgery and also for false pretenses.
H. Rodriguez, indicted for larceny.
Al. Garcia, indicted for larceny.
William Pollock, indicted for grand larceny.
Rodriguez and Garcia are the two Mexicans who are said to have stolen several pairs of trousers from the clothing store of Boynton-Richards Co., as well as a shirt from the store of Valle & O'Malley.
Pollock hails from Rock Falls and is charged with having taken a horse from the pasture of John Lally in Marion township last November and selling it to a Mt. Morris horse buyer.
Dryson appeared in court at 11 o'clock with his counsel, Martin Gannon, and by agreement the charge of forgery was dropped and he pleaded guilty to the charge of false pretenses and was given a sixty days sentence in the county jail.
Rodriguez and Garcia have retained Attorney W.G. Kent to look after their interests. On their case being called, Attorney Kent made the motion that the indictments be quashed and arguments were made on the motion.

Successful Dixon Merchant Buys Majority of Mr. Fordham's Interest
In Local Bank.

H. L. Fordham, cashier of the Union State bank, this city, will on July 1st of this year retire from active management of the institution and his position as cashier will be filled by Elmer J. Countryman, present vice president of the bank and owner of the E. J. Countryman store in Dixon. Mr. Fordham made this announcement this afternoon to a representative of the Telegraph.
Mr. Fordham will retain his residence in Dixon and although his plans are not fully matured, he expects to go into the real estate and loan business, with headquarters in this city.
Mr. Fordham came to Dixon four years ago from Compton, this county, where he was cashier of the bank. He has become well known and well liked in this city and has furthered the interests of the institution with which he has been connected. He has disposed of the majority of his holdings in the Union State bank, but will

Mr. Fordham will continue to be in touch with the management of the bank as a director.
E. J. Countryman, one of Dixon's most successful merchants, has been proprietor of one of the largest department stores in this section of the state for several years. He has had considerable experience in the banking business, having been connected with a bank at Rochelle for some time in active bank work and having been an officer in the local bank for several years. He is a very substantial and level-headed business man and his management of the Union State bank is certain to be very successful. Mr. Countryman expects to dispose of his large mercantile interests here before taking the management of the bank.

BELGIAN QUEEN IS BOWED WITH GRIEF

HER EYES ARE THOSE OF ONE WHO HAS CRIED LONG—CAN CRY NO MORE.

London, March 30. (Correspondence of the Associated Press)—"I saw the Queen of the Belgians today," writes a Scotch soldier from the front to relatives in London. "I had gone up to the ruined Cathedral with one of my officers for the afternoon service. While we were there the Queen arrived."

"She came unexpectedly. No one, so far as I know, dreamed of her coming. She was dressed with what I can only describe as religious simplicity—a severely plain costume and a tourist cap. Her companions were a Belgian officer and her physician. So far as I could hear, no word was spoken."

"Her Majesty fascinated me. She was as one who is weighed down with grief; her eyes were the eyes of one who has cried long, and could cry no more. She stood looking at the built and battered walls of the sacred building, awe-inspired, broken, crushed. She acknowledged our salute with a melancholy smile."

C. D. Sanders left last evening for San Francisco, Cal., on a few weeks' trip.

DEMENTTOWN

It isn't heroism so much as the accidental limelight upon it that makes heroes.

Every time a man looks into a mirror he imagines he sees the reflection of a hero.

Another reason why some people are willing to take a chance is because they get it cheap.

Perhaps the noblest man attainable that order by not working and fighting a good deal.

Cruel and Unusual.

(From the Palo Alto la, Reporter)
She had been visiting her sister there, but was called home by an accident that happened to her mother. The latter slipped and injured her somewhat.

The Feminine Financier,
"So she has broken the engagement! Did she give you back the diamond ring?"

"No; we are deadlocked. She says she will give me back the price I paid for it, but diamonds have doubled in value and that she is entitled to the profit."

More Puzzling.

Friend: Are you still running your puzzle page?

Editor: No; it was too simple. We are running "How to do the Latest Dance Steps; Fully Explained by Diagrams and Photographs of Mr. and Mrs. Wrasche."

Defined.

He: Can you suggest a title for my new book?

She: What is it about?

He: England's most famous battles.

She Ah! Why not call it Scrapes of English History.

Enough.

"Don't keep pestering me."
"Then you won't marry?"
"I wouldn't even be engaged to you at a summer resort."

Well Won.

"I got this cup for running."
"Whoja beat?"
"The owner and six policemen."

Lucky Hubby.

Mrs. Green: Do you ever flatter your husband?

Mrs. Wyse: Yes, I sometimes ask his advice about things.

B. F. Downing, genial, popular, good fellow, should be given some office to chase malefactors, etc. He demonstrated this a. m. that none of them can get away from him—not even the aids of the sheriff, or a couple of poor pencil pushers (the last of whom think they can go a little bit. In fact, Frank is a better chaser than our old, and almost forgotten—friend Darius Startie, the man who wore the gum elastic.

Mr. Downing, getting a glimpse of two deputy sheriffs and two newspaper fellows beating west on Third street in the sheriff's auto, immediately decided there was something doing. He turned around and made his "little old Ford ramble right along." He didn't let his quarry get out of sight either, but when he arrived to witness the very peaceful finish of the trip he came across—as usual—in the proper manner—and incidentally vowed that henceforth he wasn't going to be one bit inquisitive.

The following item, clipped from the Ogle County Reporter of Oregon, tells of a recent social function given in Miss Gale's honor:

One of the prettiest social functions of the season was a spring luncheon and shower given Monday at the Cartwright home by Misses Genevieve Cartwright and Fonda Seely in honor of Miss Martha Gale, who is to be a bride of the season. The table was laid for twenty-four guests, dainty name cards typically in the form of pink umbrellas being suggestive of the nature of the affair. The favors were pink baskets filled with spring beauties and vases of pink and white tea roses, carried out the color scheme. The center piece was a hollow mound covered with pink carnations and greens surmounted by a miniature bride and groom. After the serving of the luncheon, this mound was removed, disclosing a heap of pink and white parcels, which were presented to the bride elect in remembrance of the occasion. A delightful social afternoon followed interspersed with music. Miss Crawford of Dixon was an out of town guest.

MILITANT SUFFRAGETTES.

From ignominy to fame has been the lot of the English suffragette. It was only a year ago that a speech by Mrs. Pankhurst was a signal for a riot, if allowed to proceed at all. Now she is described by a reporter in these words:

"A graceful, dignified figure the suffrage leader makes as she faces the audience. Over a becoming black dress she wears a black lace shawl; suspended from a thin gold chain is a lorgnette, which she does not use. The Union Jack centered across a curtain of green forms the stage background."

Her women followers still send up floral offerings to the stage says the reporter. In speaking Mrs. Pankhurst carefully avoids passion and invective, but she presents her points clearly and tellingly and with conviction. At the finish of her speech young suffragettes sell souvenir postcards for a patriotic fund.

All of which goes to prove that all the women needed was a cause. When their smaller fight for the ballot was overwhelmed by the needs of the country, their enthusiasm turned in a normal way and has lost all trace of the fanaticism which so marked their deeds.

WORKING WAY THROUGH COLLEGE.

Although the expenses of sending a boy or girl through college are increasing steadily, yet the number who have worked their way through seems to be gaining as fast or faster, says an exchange.

It is one of the fine things about college life, that students who are working their own way seem to stand well socially. They may not get as many invitations, simply because they are carrying papers or driving grocery wagons at times when their classmates are hanging around the society rooms making friends. But no stigma attaches to work. Social lines may divide their parents in their home town. But young people are more generous than grown-ups, and are not apt to draw arbitrary lines of distinction.

Young people who work their own way get quite as much out of college as anyone else. They may not acquire as much of the social polish that comes from tea tables and chapter houses. But they are living a life of earnest effort, which always brings reward.

But when it comes to getting the necessary coin to pay the thousand and one necessary expenses working one's way through college gives a good training for life's same thoroughfare.

FOUR COMMISSIONERS TO VOTE FOR.

In error we stated in this column last evening that every voter should vote for five commissioners. The largest number you can legally vote for is four commissioners and one mayoralty candidate, five in all. If you vote for more than four candidates for commissioner your vote will be thrown out and not counted.

Be sure that you vote for the full four candidates for commissioner and one candidate for mayor. Do not let any selfish candidate get you to vote for him alone or for him and one or two others. If you want to vote for him, do so, but also vote for other men on the commission ticket. There are four candidates for commissioner to be elected and one for mayor. Register a choice for every one.

TALKING OF PEACE.

The Allies are telling the Germans what they will have to do if they want peace and the Germans are telling the Allies what they will have to do to stop the fight, and neither side is offering anything very attractive to the other, but just the same, the fact that they are even thinking about peace is an encouraging indication. They will tone down their terms in a month or so, until it will be easier to accept.

Don't overlook the fact that next Tuesday is election day and that it is your patriotic duty to go to the polls and vote.

men have always shown their love and esteem of woman.

SYMPTOMS.

A man can read an almanac and learn that he is sick; then he will groan about his back, in which he's found a crick. Before he read that book of dole he never knew a smart; he was a hale and hearty soul, with sunshine in his heart. But now he hangs about his coop, his head bent to his knees; he has the symptoms of the croup, of hoof and mouth disease. A man as sound as Adam's ox, when "symptoms" get his goat, will purchase nostrums by the box, and send them down his throat. Of grievous aches and pains he'll whine, as sunny days go by, and go into a slow decline, and of his symptoms die. The "symptom" fiend will cough three times, and to the drug store skip, and blow for dope his hard-earned dimes and say, "I have the grip!" And when his cough has pulled its freight, "I still am sick," says he; "my present symptoms indicate I have the housemaid's knee!" Our cares are much like pains and aches which keep that fellow sore; the most of them are flimsy fakes—just symptoms, nothing more. We wear away our little lives, and weep and walk the floor, and rend our beads and beat our wives for shadows, nothing more.

FAMILY THEATRE.
The show for the last half of the week at the Family Theatre is composed of the following vaudeville novelties.

Mr. Ned Melroy, late star of "For the Love of Mike," show, in which show he toured all the big cities of the country, will offer his monologue. Nimz, the eccentric violinist, who is said to compare with the best in vaudeville, such as Travoto and Rinaldo. Critics who have seen Mr. Nimz's performance, compare him with these two stars, and in fact, some critics have reported that he is even better than either one of these.

The feature for the four days will be the spectacular scenic production "The Land of Make Believe," in a fantastic fable of Fairyland. One man and seven girls form the cast. The ladies, a bunch of bewitching beauties, are alliteratively alluring and attractive and the production provides much fun. There are numerous novelties in this act, amongst them being The Toy-Town Cadets, The House That Jack Built, Dr. Pill and His Nursery Rhymes, and the big novelty at the finish, called At The Dandy Candy Ball. This song introduces all the different makes of confectioneries. From the opening song entitled, Play Time which is given by an exceptionally clever chorus effect, to the closing song, "At the Dandy Candy Ball," which also had its surprises. This production is filled with catchy songs, lively dances, pretty girls and the other ingredients which make it a real musical comedy boiled down to a vaude-

PRINCESS THEATRE.

Tonight the Princess has on its bill a two reel Thanhouser feature entitled "The Magnet of Destruction," with Arthur Ashley and Mignon Anderson in the leading roles, in a stirring drama of thwarted envy and revenge, well produced and acted. The other reels are "The Jeweled Dagger of Fate," a Reliance drama with its plot laid in an old curiosity shop and full of life and excitement; and a Thanhouser entitled, "A Double Exposure," with Arthur Ashley and Peggy Burke in the leading roles a story wherein a mischievous girl passes herself off as her mother.

W. C. THOMPSON IS BETTER.
Deputy County Treasurer Wm. C. Thompson is reported to be slightly improved today.

CHEEK BONE FRACTURED BY IRON

Andrew Nage, an employe of the Sandusky-Portland Cement Co., was painfully injured Tuesday night, when he was struck on the left cheek by a heavy piece of iron shafting, about seven feet in length. The heavy metal in falling struck him just below the eye, fracturing the cheek bone and narrowly missing permanent injury to the eye.

LAST STERLING-DIXON CONTESTS

The closing game in the series of bowling games arranged between the Y. M. C. A. teams of the Sterling and Dixon Associations will be rolled this evening in the alleys at Sterling. The total number of pins are being counted in the series and as it now stands, Dixon has a big lead. A number of the bowling fans are planning to go to Sterling this evening to witness the final contest.

READY TO START WORK ON BRIDGE

PLANS ARE COMPLETE FOR OVERHEAD CROSSING WEST OF THIS CITY.

The plans have been perfected and bids will soon be asked for on the erection of the new overhead bridge at McRobert's crossing over the Northwestern railroad tracks west of the city, as well as for making the necessary fill for the approach to the bridge from the north. It is hoped to have active work started on the bridge by May.

The first work to be taken up will be that of building the concrete walls for the support of the bridge on either side of the tracks and then the wing wall on the north side to stop the dirt used in making the fill from rolling down upon the tracks. It will require in the neighborhood of forty-five hundred yards of dirt to make the necessary fill from the bridge support wall to the north line of the railroad company's right-of-way, while from this point to the starting point of the grade two hundred feet to the east, the county will have to make the fill and this will require about eighty-one hundred yards of dirt. The railroad company can secure the dirt necessary for their fill within about a thousand yards of the bridge while the county has been given the stripping off the lives' gravel pit, making a haul of about two thousand yards.

MAKE UP TRIAL LIST IN COURT

DOCKET READ BY JUDGE HEALD AT SESSION THIS MORNING.

The reading of the old and new dockets was held in the circuit court this morning and a trial list for the term was made up. Cases were set for the four weeks the petit jury has been called, but it is not likely many will be heard on account of many of the attorneys being engaged in the county court with the Inlet Drainage district hearing on the annexation of more land to the district.

The greater part of next week will be taken up with criminal work and only one civil suit has been set for hearing. It is thought that at least two and possibly three cases will be tried next week on the criminal calendar. The complete trial list as arranged follows:

- April.

26—Purcell vs. Lloyd.

CAN THE LAW BE ENFORCED IN A DRY DIXON?

Here is a practical question which is worrying many excellent people. They fear that if Dixon is voted dry the laws will not be enforced against its sale or giving away. A few question whether in such case they ought not to leave things as they are.

This attitude is to us incomprehensible. It implies that it is better to have wrong-doing without let or hindrance, rather than to have anything short of an absolutely perfect enforcement of the laws.

That is to say, such people would prefer to have no laws against robbery, murder and other crimes rather than to have such laws and know that a few people who still commit such offenses. They would have no laws against the liquor business because of their fear that some saloon keeper might break such laws.

No Law Absolutely Enforced.

No known law is or can be absolutely enforced, or will be absolutely obeyed. But nearly every criminal law is practically enforced. The vast majority of mankind obey the criminal laws. Disobedience is the exception and not the rule. So with the liquor laws. They cannot be enforced in every case, absolutely. Nobody is foolish enough to expect this more than in the case of any other law. But that such laws should not be made for that reason is to assert an absurdity.

We can convince you by unmistakable evidence that such laws can be and are being, substantially and practically enforced all about us in this state. If they cannot be so enforced in Lee county there must be that there is no such discredit that can attach to us or our officials. Those who say such a thing slander us and them.

Saloons Say They Will Not Obey the Laws.

The only class of people on earth who openly, brazenly and defiantly say they will not obey the laws is the saloon class. We all know this and some of us are willing to let them make good their defiance.

Why is it that such a defiance should not rouse more than it does the anger and indignation of people who believe in laws and their enforcement? We give it up. We cannot explain, except on the theory that the liquor industry is so violent and merciless in its persecutions as to make the weak, timorous people frightened.

In fact the industry is cowardly and bluffing, and in every case a brave show made against them sends them yelping to the woods.

Local Option Laws Enforced in Adjacent Counties.

What we have just stated is clearly shown by what has happened in the counties of Whiteside, Carroll, Ogle, DeKalb, Winnebago and others.

In all of these counties there has been no difficulty in enforcing these laws, and convictions have been secured in practically every case, in some of them in every case.

Former States Attorney North of Rockford stated to the writer recently that he had tried such cases by the hundreds and got convictions in every instance, until the wets got tired of it and quit. He said that they got so scared that they nearly overwhelmed him in their rush to plead guilty and pay their fines.

In Carroll county all cases showed convictions and from Mt. Carroll 12 men paid $2,486 in fines, and all then quit the business.

In Ogle county the record is the same in effect.

In Sterling, where States Attorney Ludens proceeded vigorously against such law-breakers, he got in 13 cases convicted, a total of $4,550. He has cleared Whiteside county of such offenders and he states that there is not now a place in Sterling where liquor is sold. The only former saloon now kept open for refreshments sells sandwiches, rabbits, soda water and cider only, and the states attorney is free at any hour to inspect the place on invitation of the proprietor.

A Dixon wholesaler who when Sterling was wet shipped from 30 to 40 cases of beer a day to the latter place now confesses that he ships only one or two, to private consumers.

The record is substantially the same in the other counties we have named.

Why Cannot Lee County Do As Well?

It can. It will if Dixon is voted dry. It will have to or there will be such a shaking-up of officialdom as we have never known before. The day has passed when officials, sworn to enforce the law, may wink at its breach.

We all know that our able, efficient and vigorous states attorney will not be remiss in the performance of his duty. We feel certain that whoever is elected to office in Dixon on next Tuesday must also do his duty against the saloon, whether the town be wet or dry, if he prizes the regard of the people.

How About It When Dixon Was Dry?

It is not our policy to attack officials. We have uniformly praised them, we trust. Our complaint, or our ridicule in cases, has been directed against the position into which we have put our officers by our votes. We have by our votes sought to make our officials "regulate" the saloons and make them harmless, while still engaged in their avowed business of making and finishing drunkards. The good Lord himself could not do that. It is an impossible task. We believe sincerely that our present mayor and commissioners have done as much as humanly could be done toward the accomplishment of the work we voters, men and women, have set for them. They have failed, as such attempt has failed everywhere, because while saloons can be abolished and kept abolished they can never be maintained and kept right by "regulation."

When Dixon was dry, from 1907 to 1909, the law was brand new, and courts and lawyers uncertain as to its meaning or the extent of the remedies afforded. We did not know then that the very effective remedy of injunction in hard cases could be used. A number of shifts and evasions of the law had then been devised, but the courts as yet had not pronounced upon them and branded them as unlawful.

Shifts and Devices.

All such schemes to evade the law as could be thought of by shrewd liquor dealers and attorneys have been tried out and every one of them condemned by the courts and the users of them severely punished.

We now know as we did not then, just how to meet these schemes and stop them. They tried on a few of them in Sterling, but prompt convictions have pauperized the perpetrators.

Law Was Enforced in Dixon.

Our memories are short. We have the notion that the law was not enforced by the states attorney when Dixon was dry. This is incorrect and unjust. At first when the defiance to the law by the saloon men was open and shameless, and liquor sentiment ran strong, a jury, composed almost entirely of men who could not be accused of being dry partisans, with a saloon keeper and an ex-bar keeper among them, found the first person tried to be not guilty. We do not say whether the evidence justified such a verdict or not. That is not now important. But the very person thus acquitted, together with practically every saloon keeper in Dixon, was afterward, on the indictments presented by the same grand jury, fined heavily. We have forgotten these convictions, but remember the solitary acquittal.

Some of these gentlemen are still in business by our license. What will they do if Dixon goes dry?

Second Offenders Must Go to Jail

Section 12 of the Local Option law provides in part as follows:

"If any person shall be convicted of violating any provision of this section (the one on which these parties were fined) and shall subsequently violate any provision of this section he shall upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than $50 nor more than $200, and imprisoned in the county jail for not less than ten days nor more than thirty days."

In cases of still other convictions the fines and length of imprisonment are raised greatly.

These gentlemen have no more liking for jail life than we do, and we may feel sure that they will not subject themselves to such penalty by other violations of the local option laws.

Poor Advertisement for Lee County That Laws Cannot Be Enforced

For those who fear the effect upon Dixon's prosperity to have it badly advertised we say the worst thing we can say about it is that while the laws can be enforced in every neighboring large city they cannot be in Dixon. Who wants to come to a lawless, saloon terrified city? No one. Then stop saying we cannot enforce the law in a dry Dixon. See this space tomorrow. Law & Order League.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

A Comedy of Youth Founded by Mr. Manners on His Great Play of the Same Title—Illustrations From Photographs of the Play

Copyright, 1913, by Dodd, Mead & Company

SYNOPSIS.

Frank O'Connell, young Irish patriot, is shot and wounded by British soldiers while making a home rule speech. He is aided by Angela Kingsnorth, an English society girl, who defends him.

Angela takes O'Connell to her brother's home and helps to nurse him. He recovers, and he and the girl become fast friends.

O'Connell when well is sent to jail for disturbing the peace. He finally writes Angela that he has finished his sentence.

O'Connell and Angela wed. She has espoused the Irish cause. Her brother, a member of parliament, is very angry.

The happy couple come to America to live. A daughter is born to them. Angela's brother refuses to help the couple in any way. Angela dies.

O'Connell names his daughter Margaret and calls her "Peg." O'Connell receives a most important letter from England, which perplexes him.

Some considerable time afterward—on the eve of her twelfth and when things with O'Connell were at their worst—the answer came by cable.

She was alone when it came. Her heart beat furiously as she opened it. Even if he only sent a little it would be so welcome now when they were almost at the end. If he had been generous how wonderful it would be for her to help the man to whom nothing was too much to give her.

The fact that her brother had called strengthened the belief that he had hastened to come to her rescue.

She opened the cable and read it. Then she fell back on the pillow with a low, faint moan.

When, hours later, O'Connell returned from a vain search for work he found her senseless with the cable in her fingers. He tried to revive her without success. He sent a neighbor for a doctor. As he watched the worn, patient face, his heart full of bursting, the thought flashed through him what could have happened to cause this collapse. He became conscious of the cable he had found tightly clasped in her hand. He picked it up and read it. It was very brief. All it said was:

You have made my bed. Lie in it.

NATHANIEL KINGSNORTH.

Toward morning the doctor placed a little mite of humanity in O'Connell's arms. He looked down at it in a stupor. It had really come to pass—the child—Angela's and his! A little baby girl! The tiny wall from this child, born of love and in sorrow, seemed to waken his dull senses. He pressed the mite to him as the hot tears flowed down his cheeks. A woman in one of the adjoining flats who had kindly offered to help took the child away from him. The doctor led him to the bedside. He looked down at his loved one. A glaze was over Angela's eyes as she looked up at him. She tried to smile. All her suffering was forgotten. She knew only pride and love. She was at peace. She raised her hand, thin and transparent now, to O'Connell. He pressed it to his lips.

She whispered:

"My baby. Bring me—my baby."

He took it from the woman and placed it in Angela's weak arms. She kissed it again and again. The child wailed pitifully. The effort had been too much for Angela's failing strength. Consciousness left her.

Just before sunrise she woke. O'Connell was sitting beside her. He had never moved. The infant was sleeping on some blankets on the couch, the woman watching her.

Angela motioned her husband to bend near to her. Her eyes shone with unearthly brightness. He put his ear near her lips. Her voice was very, very faint.

"Take—care—of—our—baby, Frank. I'm—leaving you. God—help you—and—keep you—and—bless you—for—your—love—of me." She paused to take breath. Then she whispered her leave taking. The words never left O'Connell's memory for all the days of all the years that followed.

"My—last—words, dear, the—last—I'll—ever—speak—to—you, I—I—love you—with—all—my heart—and—my soul—husband! Good—goodbye, Frank." She slipped from his arms and lay, lips parted, eyes open, body still.

The struggle was over. She had gone where there are no petty treacheries, no mean brutalities—where all stand alike before the throne to render an account of their stewardship.

The brave, gentle little heart was stilled forever.

And now Peg appears for the first time and brings her radiant presence, her roguish smile, her big, frank, soulful blue eyes, her dazzling red hair, her direct, honest and outspoken truth, her love of all that is clean and pure and beautiful—Peg enters our pages and turns what was a history of romance and drama into a comedy of youth.

Peg—pure as a mountain lily, sweet as a fragrant rose, haunting as an old melody—Peg of Our Hearts comes into our story even as she entered her father's life, as the savior of these pages, even as she was the means of saving O'Connell.

And she did save her father. It was the presence and the thought of the little motherless baby that kept O'Connell's hand from destroying himself when his reason almost left him after his wife's death. The memories of the days immediately following the passing of Angela are too painful to dwell upon.

They are past. They are sacred in O'Connell's heart. They will be to the historian.

Thanks to some kindly Irishmen who heard of O'Connell's plight, he borrowed enough money to bury his dead wife and place a tablet to her memory.

He sent a message to Kingsnorth telling him of his sister's death. He neither expected nor did he receive an answer. As soon as it was possible he returned to Ireland and threw himself once again heart and soul into working for the "cause." He realized his only hope of keeping his balance was to work. He went back to the little village he was born in, and it was Father Cahill's hands that poured the baptismal waters on O'Connell's and Angela's baby, and it was Father Cahill's voice that read the baptismal service.

She was christened Margaret.

Angela, one night, when it was nearing her time, begged him if it were a girl to christen her Margaret, after her mother, since all the best in Angela came from her mother.

O'Connell would have liked much to name the mite Angela. But his dead wife's wishes were paramount. So Margaret the baby was christened. It was too distinguished a name and too long for such a little bundle of pink and white humanity. It did not seem to fit her. So "Peg" she was named, and "Peg" she remained for the rest of her life.

Looming large in Peg's memories in after life was her father showing her St. Kieran's hill and pointing out the mount on which he stood and spoke that day, while her mother, hidden by that dense mass of trees, saw every movement and heard every word.

Then somehow her childish thoughts all seemed to run to home rule—to love of Ireland and hatred of England—to thinking all that was good of Irishmen and all that was bad of Englishmen.

"Why do ye hate the English so much, father?" she asked O'Connell once, looking up at him with a puzzled look in her big blue eyes and the most adorable brogue coming fresh from her tongue.

"Why do ye hate them?" she repeated.

"I've good cause to, Peg, me darlin'!" he answered, and a deep frown gathered on his brow.

"Sure wasn't me mother English?" Peg asked.

"She was."

"Then why do ye hate the English?"

"It 'ud take a long time to tell ye that, Peggy. Some day I will. There's many a reason why the Irish hate the English, and many a good reason too. But there's one why you and I should hate them and hate them with all the bitterness that's in us."

"And what is it?" said Peg curiously.

"I'll tell ye. When yer mother and I were almost starvin', and she lyin' on a bed of sickness, she wrote to an Englishman an' asked him to assist her. An' this is the reply she got: 'Ye've made yer bed. Lie in it.' That was the answer she got the day before you were born, and she died givin' ye life. And by the same token the man that wrote that shameful message to a dyin' woman was her own brother."

"Her own brother, yer tellin' me?" asked Peg wrathfully.

"I am, Peg. Her own brother, I'm tellin' ye."

"It's bad luck that man'll have all his life," said Peg fiercely. "To write me mother that—an' she dyin'! Faith I'd like to see him some day—just meet him—an' tell him"—She stopped, her little fingers clinched into a miniature fist.

CHAPTER VIII.

For the Cause.

O'CONNELL had changed very much since the days of St. Kieran's hill. As was foreboded earlier, he no longer urged violence. He had come under the influence of the more temperate men of the party and was content to win by legislative means what Ireland had failed to accomplish wholly by conflict, although no one recognized more thoroughly than O'Connell what a large part the determined attitude of the Irish party in resisting the English laws, depriving them of the right of free speech and of meeting to spread light among the ignorant, had played in wringing some measure of recognition and of tolerance from the English ministers.

What changed O'Connell more particularly was the action of a band of so called "patriots" who operated in many parts of Ireland—maining cattle, ruining crops, injuring peaceable farmers who did not do their bidding and shooting at landlords and prominent people connected with the government.

He avoided the possibility of imprisonment again for the sake of Peg. What would befall her if he were taken from her?

The continual thought that preyed upon him was that he would have nothing to leave her when his call came. Do what he would, he could make but little money, and when he had a small surplus he would spend it on Peg—a shawl to keep her warm or a ribbon to give a gleam of color to the drab little clothes.

On great occasions he would buy her a new dress, and then Peg was the proudest little child in the whole of Ireland.

Every year on the anniversary of her mother's death O'Connell had a mass said for the repose of Angela's soul, and he would kneel beside Peg through the service and be silent for the rest of the day. One year he had candles blessed by the archbishop lit on Our Lady's altar, and he stayed long after the service was over. He sent Peg home. But, although Peg obeyed him partially by leaving the church, she kept watch outside until her father came out. He was wiping his eyes as he saw her. He pretended to be very angry.

"Didn't I tell ye to go home?"

"Ye did, father."

"Then why didn't ye obey me?"

"Sure an' what would I be doin' at home, all alone, without you? Don't be cross with me, father."

He took her hand, and they walked home in silence. He had been crying, and Peg could not understand it. She had never seen him do such a thing before, and it worried her. It did not seem right that a man should cry. It seemed a weakness, and that her father of all men should do it, he who was not afraid of anything or any one, was wholly unaccountable to her.

When they reached home Peg busied herself about her father, trying to make him comfortable, furtively watching him all the while. When she had put him in an easy chair and brought him his slippers and built up the fire she sat down on a little stool by his side. After a long silence she stroked the back of his hand and then gave him a little tug. He looked down at her.

"What is it, Peg?"

"Was my mother very beautiful, father?"

"The most beautiful woman that ever lived in all the wurld, Peg."

"She looks beautiful in the picture ye have of her."

From the inside pocket of his coat he drew out a little beautifully painted miniature. The frame had long since been worn and frayed. O'Connell looked at the face, and his eyes shone.

"The man that painted it couldn't put the soul of her into it. That he couldn't; not the soul of her."

"Am I like her at all, father?" asked Peg wistfully.

"Sometimes ye are, dear, very like."

After a little pause Peg said:

"Ye loved her very much, father, didn't ye?"

He nodded. "I loved her with all the heart of me and all the strength of me."

Peg sat quiet for some minutes; then she asked him a question very quietly and hung in suspense on his answer:

"Do ye love me as much as ye loved her, father?"

"It's different, Peg, quite, quite different."

"Why is it?" She waited.

He did not answer.

"Sure, love is love whether ye feel it for a woman or a child," she persisted.

O'Connell remained silent.

"Did ye love her better than ye love me, father?" Her soul was in her great blue eyes as she waited excitedly for the answer to that, to her, momentous question.

"Why do ye ask me that?" said O'Connell.

"Because I always feel a little sharp pain right through my heart whenever ye talk about me mother. Ye see, father, I've thought all these years that I was the one ye really loved."

"Ye're the only one I have in the wurld, Peg."

"And ye don't love her memory better than ye do me?"

O'Connell put both of his arms around her.

"Ye mother is with the saints, Peg, and here are you by me side. Sure there's room in me heart for the memory of her and the love of you."

She breathed a little sigh of satisfaction and nestled on to her father's shoulder. The little fit of childish jealousy of her dead mother's place in her father's heart passed.

She wanted no one to share her father's affection with her. She gave him all of hers. She needed all of his.

When Peg was eighteen years old and they were living in Dublin, O'Connell was offered quite a good position in New York. It appealed to him. The additional money would make things easier for Peg. She was almost a woman now, and he wanted her to get the finishing touches of education that would prepare her for a position in the world if she met the man she felt she could marry. Whenever he would speak of marriage Peg would laugh scornfully.

"Who would I be after marryin', I'd like to know? Where in the wurld would I find a man like you?"

And no coaxing would make her carry on the discussion or consider its possibility.

It still harassed him to think he had so little to leave her if anything happened to him. The offer to go to America seemed providential. Her mother was buried there. He would take Peg to her grave.

Peg grew very thoughtful at the idea of leaving Ireland. All her little likes and dislikes, her impulsive affections and hot hatred, were bound up in that country. She dreaded the prospect of meeting a number of new people.

Still, it was for her father's good, so she turned a brave face to it and said: "Sure it is the finest thing in the wurld for both of us."

But the night before they left Ireland she sat by the little window in her bedroom until daylight looking back through all the years of her short life.

It seemed as if she were cutting off all that beautiful golden period. She would never again know the free, careless, happy-go-lucky, living from day to day existence that she had loved so much.

It was a pale, wistful, tired little Peg that joined her father at breakfast next morning.

His heart was heavy too. But he laughed and joked and sang and said how glad they ought to be—going to that wonderful new country and, by the way, the country Peg was born in too! And then he laughed again and said how fine she looked and how well he felt and that it seemed as if it were God's hand in it all.

And Peg pretended to cheer up, and they acted their parts right to the end—until the last line of land disappeared and they were headed for America. Then they separated and went to their little cabins to think of all that had been. And every day they kept up the little deception with each other until they reached America.

They were cheerless days at first for O'Connell. Everything reminded him of his first landing twenty years before with his young wife—both so full of hope, with the future stretching out like some wonderful panorama before them. He returns twenty years older to begin the fight again—this time for his daughter.

His wife was buried in a little Catholic cemetery a few miles outside New York city. There he took Peg one day, and they put flowers on the little mound of earth and knelt awhile in prayer. Beneath that earth lay not only his wife's remains, but O'Connell's early hopes and ambitions were buried with her.

Neither spoke either going to or returning from the cemetery. O'Connell's heart was too full. Peg knew what was passing through his mind and sat with her hands folded in her lap—silent. But her little brain was busy thinking back.

Peg had much to think of during the early days following her arrival in New York. At first the city awed her with its huge buildings and ceaseless whirl of activity and noise. She longed to be back in her own little green, beautiful country.

O'Connell was away during those first days until late at night.

He found a school for Peg. She did not want to go to it, but just to please her father she agreed. She lasted in it just one week. They laughed at her brogue and teased and tormented her for her absolute lack of knowledge.

Rheumatism

Just put a few drops of Sloan's on the painful spot and the pain stops. It is really wonderful how quickly Sloan's acts. No need to rub it in—laid on lightly it penetrates to the bone and brings relief at once. Kills rheumatic pain instantly.

Mr. James E. Alexander, of North Platte, Neb., writes: "Many aches in my back and hips brought on rheumatism in the sciatic nerve. I had it so bad one night when sitting in my chair, that I had to jump on my feet to get relief. I at once applied your Liniment to the affected part and in less than ten minutes it was perfectly easy. I think it is the best of all Liniments I have ever used."

Secretary Stanton's Epitaphic Words as Spoken by the Deathbed of Abraham Lincoln.

Fiftieth Anniversary of the Tragic Death of the Great War President—Worldwide Sorrow Over the Close of His Career.

By Capt. GEORGE L. KILMER, Late U. S. V.
[Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.]

REMARKABLE, perhaps phenomenal, thing about the passing of Lincoln from our national life is the fact that during his taking off arrested the very pulsations of existence in countless thousands of his countrymen. For an indefinite space the life beat and thought beat, as it were, of men and women stood still or marked time.

The late Richard Watson Gilder of the Century, who was an indefatigable student of Lincoln and a nation wide traveler, said that twenty to forty years after the event, whenever he spoke to survivors of the tragic era, east, west or south, about the death of Lincoln, they would at once respond by recalling the time of day when they heard the news, where they were, what they were doing and even the words and ejaculations called forth in their presence by the paralyzing announcement.

And that personal paralysis—for such it seemed—was not limited to Lincoln's partisan admirers. Thoughtful adults of all shades of opinion as to the vital issues of the war were brought under its sway. In less forceful but none the less significant manner the outside world was affected. Abroad, as at home, and even in the enemy's camps criticism and aspersions reversed themselves by eulogy and panegyric when the bullet of a madman halted the life work of Abraham Lincoln the night of April 14 fifty years ago.

Fateful April 14.

No tragedy was needed to give April 14 prominence in the war annals of the republic nor of Lincoln. On that day four years before the stars and stripes had been for the first time humbled by men born under its aegis, and that very day, April 14, 1865, the flag, by Lincoln's own order, had been hoisted to float again over the walls of Sumter. Moreover, four years before, in the hours corresponding to those when the stage was laid for the tragedy of 1865, Lincoln was preparing that epoch making proclamation which answered the indignity cast upon Old Glory by a clarion call to arms.

And the day itself, April 14, 1865, would have stood apart in executive annals as the one when Lincoln officially formulated the policy he had in mind for ending the political confusion due to the war, the terms upon which the seceding citizens would be received back as citizens. This process he once expressed in a characteristic simile that chickens are produced by hatching, not by smashing, eggs. All in all, the fateful day went, as other administrative days of the war had gone up to its close—up to the turning point from work to play. At the cabinet meeting General Grant, just from Appomattox, was present and called upon to explain the military situation. There were still over 100,000 Confederates in arms, including Johnston's 21,000 confronting Sherman in North Carolina. Mobile had been captured, but his garrison of 17,000 escaped. News of this, however, was not before the cabinet.

Interest at this meeting centered upon Lincoln's "Louisiana plan" for getting the seceders back into harmony with the states they had fought for four years. Said he, "We must extinguish resentment if we expect union." One cabinet officer described Lincoln's appearance and demeanor at this last meeting as "more cheerful and happy than I had ever seen him."

Last Appeal For Peace.

Early in the month Mr. Lincoln had been at the front with Grant when Petersburg and Richmond fell. The last he saw of the Confederacy it was going to pieces, and while using the phrase "after the war is over" in his official arguments he talked as though the end had come. At the cabinet meeting he merely clinched some of the arguments which he had used in a speech responding to a serenade at the White House the evening of the 11th.

The last address to come from his lips in public. Referring to the new Louisiana state government which had just been organized by former secessionists to return to the Union, he said: "If we now reject and spurn them we do our utmost to disorganize and disperse them. We say to the white man: 'You are worthless or worse. We will neither help you nor be helped by you.' To the black man we say, 'This cup of liberty which these your old masters hold to your lips we will dash from you and leave you to the chances of gathering the spilled and scattered contents in some vague and undefined when, where and how.' . . . Concede that the new government is only to what it should be as the egg is to the fowl, we will sooner have the fowl by hatching the egg than by smashing it."

Last Happy, Happy Hours.

The cabinet meeting over, Lincoln went for his usual daily drive with Mrs. Lincoln. He talked like a boy out of college about his plans. To her he said, "The war is over," and that at the end of his four years he would go back to Springfield to the home he had not visited since he left in February, 1861, to take his seat in the White House, and resume law practice.

On the return to the White House Lincoln saw a group of personal friends crossing the lawn and hailed them with the greeting, "Come back, boys; come back!" The party entered the executive office, and the hours passed so pleasantly that Lincoln forgot the flight of time and that he had made a theater engagement for the evening, which should be first in his mind. He began reading a humorous book and, although called many times to dinner, was loath to go, but promised each time to "come right away."

Still reading, he finally received a somewhat peremptory summons, and the bearer reminded him of the theater engagement. That recalled it was with General Grant—he left the party abruptly, never to see them again.

Disappointment and Misgivings.

An extraordinarily popular play of the wartime was "Our American Cousin," in which an English lord was held up to ridicule. Our overseas cousins were far from popular here in those days. Laura Keane, a great favorite and the original producer of the play in America, had the star part as it was produced at Ford's theater and was having a benefit that night. It was announced that the president and his wife and the "hero of Appomattox" and his wife would occupy a box together.

Lincoln's story telling dalliance had delayed the White House dinner, but that was not all. While he was reading or telling stories that afternoon Mrs. Lincoln received a message saying that the Grants were departing for Burlington and would not therefore join the theater party. The theater manager was notified, but did not recall his announcement, and Lincoln was thereby, reluctantly, it seems, constrained to go anyway rather than disappoint the expectant public.

Major Rathbone and his stepister, the daughter of Senator Ira Harris, were invited to take the chairs assigned to General and Mrs. Grant. Schuyler Colfax, who was to leave Washington next morning for Indiana on a mission for the president, called after dinner, and Lincoln talked with him for some time, making a written appointment for a third party at 9 a. m. the 15th.

Still reluctant, Lincoln entered the carriage, but, clung to Colfax's hand and referred vehemently to the errand the latter was charged with in the west.

The Last Ovation's Awful Sequel.

The action on the stage halted as the party was finally ushered in to the tune of "Hail to the Chief." Cheering, waving handkerchiefs and hats continued, the audience rising, until the presidential party was seated; then the play went on. Mr. Lincoln enjoyed the entertainment and seemed to lose the air of abstraction and indifference which had come upon him as soon as he learned of Grant's departure.

Many in the audience were still expectant of Grant's arrival, and during the evening every man who passed along the aisle behind the seats leading to the box entrance was scrutinized. One after another passed down the aisle, but no one approached the box until the second scene of act 3 was on, with Harry Hawke playing the character of Asa Trenchard, the Yankee of the piece, alone on the stage. This was about 10:30.

There was an awkward pause, an actress having just made her exit and another being about to enter. While the action halted a pistol shot was heard which all but the initiated supposed was from the president's box. But a scream from the president's box, confusion there and a man half leaping, half tumbling from that box to the stage brought the audience to their feet. Some eyes followed the motions of the intruder on the stage; others were riveted on the box. Miss Harris stepped to the side nearest the auditorium and excitedly asked for water or stimulants, adding, "The president is shot."

Wild disorder took possession of the house and the troupe of players. Some excited ones attempted to pursue the fleeing assassin; others rushed toward the box entrance. The latter were kept at bay by Rathbone, who asked them to fetch surgeons. Laura Keane quitted the stage people and went to the side of the wounded president, securing a measure of isolation for the box until surgeons arrived.

Strange Death Chamber.

All this time, which was not long by the dial, the wounded president sat calmly in his chair as if dozing, his head drooping on his chest. From this posture the surgeons lifted him and stretched him on the floor, where, it is said, Laura Keane took his head in her lap and began to staunch the flow of blood from a wound (which she was first to discover) behind the ear. Although the weapon had been held close, the hard bone had checked the bullet's force, and it did not leave the head, so no laceration of that marvelous face was disturbed.

From the turmoil of the started theater the scene changed before midnight to the parlor floor of a house opposite, where the still unconscious president lay for the better part of the night, with only physicians, personal attendants and his wife and friends at the bedside. Later, on hurried summons, came Secretary of War Stanton, Welles, secretary of the navy; Senator Sumner and Mr. Colfax, the last official to grasp the hand of Lincoln alive and to exchange words with him. These lingered to the last near the side of their dying chief, alternately watching and inditing and sending out news messages and orders to the press and to the army camps. Gradually the surgeons revealed the hopelessness of the case—the imminence of a death that might change the nation's weal.

PRISONERS WOULD MAKE LONG PARADE

NUMBER HELD IN GERMANY WOULD FORM PROCESSION 625 MILES LONG.

Berlin, March 30.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press. To visualize the number of Russian prisoners and guns taken by von Hindenburg in the so-called "Winter's Battle" to the east of the Masurian Lakes, one of the German papers has figured out what a great procession they would make.

If the 104,000 prisoners, the 300 pieces of artillery, and the 2,000 wagons, it says, were to form a procession with four men abreast, with the artillery and wagons in usual marching order, they would reach 112 miles in length. It would require thirty hours for such a procession to pass a given point. In the same way it is figured that all the prisoners of war now held by Germany—a total of 780,000 men—would make a procession 625 miles long.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE

The Following Statement Should Form Conclusive Proof of Merit to Every Dixon Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of any remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorers who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers for Doan's Kidney Pills. They are twice-told and confirmed with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following. It's from a Dixon resident:

B. A. Worley, blacksmith, Peoria Ave., Dixon, says: "The action of my kidneys was irregular and annoying and my back ached. After using Doan's Kidney Pills, the pains left my back and my kidneys became regular in action." (Statement given May 21st, 1912.)

Over two two years later, Mr. Worley said: "Whenever my back gets lame and sore and needs a kidney medicine, I use Doan's Kidney Pills, and they give me relief."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Worley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
